NOTES.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE. By Henry Pegram, A.R.A. (See p. 29.) Sir Thomas Browne was born in London in 1605, and died in 1682. He practised as a physician in Norwich, and was knighted by Charles II., on the occasion of a royal visit to East Anglia in 1671. His book, "Religio Medici," is still read by lovers of style.

This statuette is a replica in miniature of the life-size work exhibited at the Academy last year, and erected at Norwich.

ORPHEUS. By W. Hamo Thornycroft, R.A. (See p. 32.) On his return from the Argonautic expedition, Orpheus dwelt in a cave in Thrace, where he devoted himself to the task of civilising the wild inhabitants of the land. Euripides tells us that, when Orpheus made music upon his golden lyre, wild and savage beasts were tamed, and approached to listen; even the trees and rocks drew near to hear the enchanting melodies.

PERSEUS AND ANDROMEDA. By Henry Pegram, A.R.A. (See p. 33.) Again we are shown the rescue of the fair daughter of King Cepheus when exposed as tribute to the terrible scourge of the country of Ethiopia. Jealousy of the maiden's superior beauty had caused the Nereids to intrigue to secure her death. In this they had all but succeeded when the Argive hero appeared, rescued their victim, and afterwards made her his wife.

COURAGE. By W. Hamo Thornycroft, R.A. (See p. 66.) This group is one of the four on the Gladstone memorial in the Strand, London.

"PLAYMATES": MARJORIE, KATHLEEN,
JOAN, DAUGHTERS OF
SAMUEL RYDER, ESQ., J.P.
FRANK O. SALISBURY.

Standard on which is emblazoned a representation of God the Father, with two angels and the words "Jhesus, Maria." In the front rank of the French horse are the standards of their great leaders, among them those of Bourgoyne, Dunois, &c.

THE AWAKENING OF GALATEA. By Herbert Schmalz. (See p. 85.) Pygmalion, a sculptor of Cyprus, owing to the behaviour of the women of that island, vowed never to marry. He, however, became enamoured of a statue which he had carved in marble of his ideal, and prayed to the Goddess of Beauty to give her life. When he was in despair, she sent down a vitalising ray and imparted to the marble figure of Galatea the pulsating glow of human life.

WANDERING PSYCHE. By Arthur Hacker, A.R.A. (See p. 88.) Psyche was warned by her lover, Cupid, that she must not seek to discover his identity; but the beautiful mortal could not restrain her curiosity. When the god found that she had disregarded his prohibition he immediately left her. The disconsolate Psyche, wandering in search of her lover, endured many sorrows and was cruelly tormented by Venus. Moved by her distress, Cupid, at last, came to her aid, married her, and granted her the boon of immortality.

THE RUSH HALO. By Jessie Macgregor. (See p. 102.) In the official Latin text of "The Trial and Rehabilitation of Jeanne d'Arc" is recorded the account of the "Maid of Orleans," of her call to be the saviour of her people. In this picture the artist has taken for illustration the story of one of the visions thus recounted:

"It was S. Michael. I saw him before my eyes. He was not alone, but quite surrounded by the angels of Heaven."

TITHONUS AND AURORA. By G. Spencer Watson. (See p. 115.) Tithonus, son of Laomedon, King of Troy, was so handsome that the goddess Aurora became enamoured of him. At her request Jupiter bestowed immortality upon Tithonus, but as the request did not extend to immortal youth, Tithonus became in the usual course old, ugly and decrepit, and, according to the legend, Aurora changed him into a grasshopper. The artist has drawn upon Tennyson's poem "Tithonus" for his subject, which is designed to illustrate the lines:

"Immortal Age before Immortal Youth.

Let me go. Take back thy gift."

SEMITA VITÆ. By A. C. Lucchesi. (See p. 118.) The artist furnishes us with the following interpretation of his allegory:—The figure represents Life, whose path is shown to be rocky and uneven. Thorns, symbolical of the seriousness and sorrows of earthly life, are on the one side, and on the other a bauble stands for its follies and frivolities. The attention of the figure is centred on a crucifix which lies across its path—the emblem of the greatest Sacrifice for Life's wellbeing, and the finger-post to the "strait gate" and "narrow way." It is the crucial moment when a definite path has to be chosen on which Life shall run its course.

INTERNATIONAL COURTESIES. By W. L. Wyllie, R.A. (See p. 124.) The scene represented is Portsmouth Harbour, with the vessels of the Russian Fleet lying alongside the Railway Jetty.

ZEPHYR AND AURORA. By Professor Gerald Moira. (See p. 125.) An illustration of the lines in Milton's "L'Allegro":

"Zephyr with Aurora playing
As he met her once a-Maying
There, on beds of violet blue."

MARGARET. By Arthur H. Buckland. (See p. 131.)

"Who lent you, love, your mortal dower
Of pensive thought and aspect pale,
Your melancholy sweet and frail
As perfume of the cuckoo-flower?"

—Tennyson.

THE CHANTREY PURCHASES. "The Rehearsal," by L. Campbell Taylor (see p. 47); "Runswick Bay," by Arthur Friedenson (see p. 143); "The Earth and the Elements," by Bertram Mackennal (see p. 155); and "The Seeds of Love" (a water-colour), by W. G. Simmonds.
